From the Great Duke's Head Quarters at Pilſen, September 20.

WE arrived here Yeſterday, after having march'd with the greateſt Diligence. On our Arrival we were informed, that there was a Detachment of the Enemy at Waidhauſſen, on which the Grand Duke order'd a ſmall one of Dragoons, under the Command of General Smertzing, who attack'd and kill'd about 200, and put the reſt to flight. General Marſhal Khevenhuller is expected here To-morrow, and we reckon in four Days to join his Army at Chamb, where he lies encamped. Major General Helfreick, and General Nadaſti, have join'd, and have taken Poſſeſſion of a moſt advantageous Poſt at Roſshault. We hear they are part at Amberg and part at Mauthauſen; that Maillebois's Corps conſiſts of about 15000 Foot, 4500 Horſe, and 3000 Dragoons, with a Free Company of 700 Men. That Seckendorf with his Body of Cologneſes, and Palatines, lies encamped behind the Naab, where they are intrenched. We learn from Prague of the 17th, that the French have taken Poſſeſſion of their old Camp on the Moldaw, and had made a Sally towards a Village called Verjoritz, half an Hour from Prague, where they were pillaging what they could find, which was but little, but being attack'd by our Hungarians, they loſt about 50 of their Men, and the reſt retired into the Town. The Blockade of Prague is compoſed of the following Troops under General Feſtutitz and General Forgatz, of Lycaners 2194, of Sclavonians 1052, of the Saave 250, of the Danube 400, of ſeveral Regiments of Huſſars 4323, of Feſtutitz's own Regiment 400, of Raſciens 450, and of Trenſchiners 241.

Vienna, Sept. 22. M. Seckendorf is poſted behind the Naab, which falls into the Danube above Ratisbon. There is ſome Appearance of the Enemy's retrenching themſelves behind that River. They have left a conſiderable Garriſon at Straubing, while Marſhal Khevenhuller, after having left one likewiſe at Deckendorf, with ſeveral Parties to exact Contributions, marched the 16th, and is arrived with the main Army at Chamb, and has poſted a Body at Wald Munchen. The Great Duke's Army repoſed Yeſterday at Pilſen, and the Junction will be on the 25th Inſtant.

Dreſden, Sept. 26, N. S. A Letter has been juſt received from General Feſtutitz, with an Account, that on the 20th the French made a Sally with about 7000 Men, on that Side of Prague where Count Forgatz is poſted, who, to make himſelf as ſtrong as he could, drew to him all his advanced Guards; but the Enemy attempted nothing till Midnight, when they detached about 600 Men, both Infantry and Cavalry, to Milnick, whom Count Forgatz ordered to be immediately purſued, and his Corps getting thither the next Day, took a Cornet with ſome French Soldiers Priſoners of War. He adds, that the French ſeem diſpoſed to keep Milnick, and have begun to fortify it; that he hears a Detachment is marching from Egra towards Leuthmeritz, which he will endeavour to intercept; that on the 22d Marſhal Broglio made a Sally with near 10000 Men, and 12 Cannon, which obliged him (Feſtutitz) to retreat half a Mile, but that he had nevertheleſs attacked the French Foragers, killed ſeveral, and took 64 Priſoners; after which the Marſhal retreated, and the Huſſars returned to their former Poſt, and no Day paſſes but they bring in ten or more Priſoners.

Hague, Oct. 5, N. S. Count Saxe's March towards Egra proves to have been only a Motion to the Left of Maillebois, to find ſome Paſſage unguarded through the Mountains into Bohemia, and he having ſucceeded in that View, the whole Army followed him, and deſcended into Bohemia on the 25th paſt, and poſted itſelf near Plana, with only the little River Myſe between them and the Great Duke; however, though the News might come from thence in ſix Days, we hear nothing yet of any Action. The Lord Carteret arrived here to Day about Noon. The French, we hear, have opened the Sluices, and made large Inundations round ſome of their Towns,
